Drogheda is not being treated favorably due to the narrow view approach of planning based on county borders and Dublin environs. We need to take a more holistic view of our towns and the people living within it's vicinity to determine status and resource/capital investment requirements. Drogheda is now the largest town in Ireland when you make a logical assessment of the town and it's environs and it should be treated as such. Companies are seeing value in our town and are investing here regardless but the vast majority of it's potential remains untapped due to the archaic approach the government is taking when planning for this town. Please make a change and make a difference for the people of drogheda.
