Sir/Madam,

I am really concerned by the fact that Drogheda has not been included in the draft national planning framework.

It makes no sense to exclude the sixth largest urban centre in the country from the national framework particularly considering its potential as a major hub with its proximity to both Belfast and Dublin. Ease-of-access and the ability to distribute goods is vital to a region's development and no other regional town can match Drogheda in this respect as it occupies a prime location on the North/South Corridor with air, sea and motorway links within 20 minutes of the town. Drogheda's young and educated population and the availability of high-speed broadband makes the town an attractive target for FDI which would in turn help create local jobs. But Drogheda needs to be included in the National Planning Framework to accomplish this and we need new thinking to address anomalies such as an almost-empty IDA Business Park which is unable to access BMW (Border Midlands Region) funding because it is in the wrong county. Third-level education is another area that Drogheda could excel in with industry-specific training centres.

Inclusion in the Framework could also address issues like regional transport. No other town in the state is split in half by a toll like Drogheda is. The tolls on the slip roads in and out of the town should be removed. The Port Company, Irish Rail and road hauliers should form a regional transport committee to properly plan the free movement of goods. The Port Access Northern Cross Route, long identified as a vital infrastructure project for Drogheda must finally be actioned and completed.

In local government, Drogheda Borough Council should be reinstated to properly manage this large urban area, with a view to Drogheda gaining city status and having a city council. Drogheda's population has grown at a faster rate than the other five large urban centres. If we are planning into the future, this fast expanding population must be planned for.

The National Planning Framework document references urban centres around Ireland up to the year 2040 including Dundalk and even Newry which is not in the Republic of Ireland, yet Drogheda is not referenced once. It's actually upsetting that Drogheda is not mentioned once and I think it's unacceptable.

The idea of planning is to anticipate events and plan accordingly. If the Minister is serious about balanced regional development, as is mentioned in the foreword to the framework, then Drogheda needs to be for included.

Yours,
Paula Owens
