Hi,

I think there should be a better spread of investment rather than the East coast and the disastrous “decentralisation” of Charlie Mc Creevey/ Bertie Ahern.

Derelict sites in the inner city and surrounding suburbs should be a thing of the past, particularly with the increase in homelessness. The fact that a lot of O’Connell Street, Dublin is derelict is a crying shame and an awful advert for Ireland Inc.

Landlords and landowners should be made to pay for sitting on unused property – now. Not in a few years’ time!

There should be more cycle lanes and green spaces. There are more commutes by bike in Dublin than by car. But it’s not a bike friendly city. Even more people would be encouraged to cycle if it was.

Regards,

Don Reilly
